

ABSTRACT

A method and apparatus for inspecting a plurality of optical modules, in which the optical modules are given channel numbers, a plurality of inspection items, which are related to optical characteristics and/or electrical characteristics of the optical modules, are measured in parallel, and measurement data on the inspection items is stored in storing device. This makes it possible to inspect the optical modules efficiently in a short time, eliminating waiting time.